Turn any radio station à € œTOP 40â € and I can almost guarantee that you will be listening to one of the many popular four-quarter songs in 10 minutes. Or it will be the song that is in, the next song, or the song after. And if you had tune in a couple of minutes before, it was probably the song that has just ended! Nothing demonstrates this clearly than this video of the Australian musical comedy, à € œThe axis of impressive. They literally take 4 chords and cyclon through dozens of popular songs that you know and love. Check out: from the beginning of Heardnplay.com (August, 2000), I have been preaching, à € œThe songs follow the recycled, reusable patterns, repeaters. There is nothing new under the sun. In fact, once you have learned enough of these patterns, the à € œPrincipio de Paretoâ begins and will find you playing the same things again and again. Also known as the rule of à € œ80/20â € and applied to music, the Pareto principle tells us that 80% of the songs will come from the same 20% of chords and chord progressions. I think this is true, if not more dryscial (especially in today's music, where it could be 90/10). 4-Chord songs illustrate this perfectly. Click for Tweet that is not saying that each song will sound the same. Although I have shared this viral vid with 47 songs of 4 rooms following the patron of SAME chords, when they are added in varied rhythms, melodias, instruments, investments of chords/voicings, and letters, you can create masterpieces à € œNew that fooled to your public to think that they are new creations. We, like Ear Musicians, know better. (And to be fair, some will argue that, despite this, they are new creations. I understand it. My grandmother's cake is, after everything, my grandmother's cake.
